

SAMPLE SOP FOR HOTEL MANAGEMENT IN CANADA

Hotel and restaurant are a few of the fastest-growing markets in the modern world. What makes this trade different from the rest is primarily its cultural aspects. Given that food is a basic necessity for life and its presence is ubiquitous in all parts of the world, it opens up an interesting array of possibilities. After having reinforced my education in management with work experience at a luxury hotel, I wish to further my career along these lines. I am sure that the MS in Hotel Management from your reputed academy will help me achieve this.

Most professionals I know in the hospitality industry have made their way into the business by following their passion for experimenting with flavors. However, I started off with a management background. After completing my graduation, I got hired as a business analyst in an investing firm. One of the startup businesses that my company adopted and funded was a seafood restaurant. Later when my company finalized the acquisition of the hotel, I accepted the offer to be promoted as an assistant manager.

I was excited to expand my repertoire of managerial skills by serving a different industry. My duties entailed accommodating high-profile guests, organizing the resources for their entertainment, ensuring that there is a sufficient supply of commodities, and overseeing the quality of the services. The stint bestowed me with the opportunity to form acquaintances with people from different walks of life. It has also developed in me a cultural appreciation for cuisines from all parts of the globe.

Rapt by the prospects of a career in hotel management, I decided to step up to a luxury hotel. Although I have three years of experience in managing a medium-scale hotel under my belt, I was rejected because I did not have a formal education in the trade. This is when I decided to strengthen my academic profile with an MS in Hotel Management. However, I chose to seek education from a foreign university, as it would provide me with a greater degree of exposure, compared to Indian institutions.

Canada has retained its position as the most sought-after academic destination for over a decade. Its eminence stems from the fact that its academia offers educational programs that are on the same wavelength as most modern industries. This aspect evidently makes the learning outcome invaluable for job seekers. I was able to confirm that a degree from Canadian universities has a high acceptance in my country. Considering the general quality and affordability of life in the country, I have decided to pursue the program from Canada. The country offers the same quality of education as in the US, the UK, and Australia, but at a more reasonable price. Canada also has a multicultural academic environment and I believe that the opportunity to mingle with students from various cultures and backgrounds will broaden my outlooks meaningfully.

As soon as I started looking into the best colleges in the country, I realized that making a call was going to be a tough task. Canada has a large number of institutions that offer high-quality courses and it was not easy to single out the best one. I conducted a detailed analysis by reading university websites and reviews, and by asking about in forums. It was there that I came across the Imperial Hotel Management College in Vancouver.

I was instantly captivated by the reputation of the college and its features. I found that your academy implements experiential teaching methods that entail participatory learning activities like case studies, seminars, and business simulations. I am sure that this is the best approach to inculcate important managerial traits such as organization skills, leadership, communication skills, policymaking capacity, problem-solving ability, and the flair for conflict-resolution.

As a sociable person, I am impressed with the proactive efforts your academy takes to promote extracurricular activities. I am also content with the faculty for management that includes excellent teachers with academic and professional experience. This holistic learning ambiance will instill me with the necessary skill and knowledge in the most effective way. As I also came to know about the learning facilities of the college, I was exceptionally confident while making the final verdict.

I fully understand that higher education in Canada is an expensive endeavor and have taken the preparations to meet these challenges. I have sufficient funds saved from my earning and can afford the course without taking a toll. In order to furnish evidence of my financial capability, I have presented all the documents pertaining to the same with the application.

Forwarding five years into the future, I envision myself serving as a senior manager in a five-star hotel. I feel confident that this course will bridge my transition to such roles and look forward to the opportunity of joining your esteemed university.
